

The first of these is the fact that the majority of the population is now employed in the service sector, which is a sector that is not as heavily regulated as the manufacturing sector. This has led to a decline in the power of trade unions, which have been unable to negotiate better wages and conditions for their members. The second factor is the fact that the majority of the population is now employed in the private sector, which is not as heavily regulated as the public sector. This has led to a decline in the power of trade unions, which have been unable to negotiate better wages and conditions for their members. The third factor is the fact that the majority of the population is now employed in the service sector, which is a sector that is not as heavily regulated as the manufacturing sector. This has led to a decline in the power of trade unions, which have been unable to negotiate better wages and conditions for their members.
